 SHORT STORY OF THE DAY. 00000000000 • 000000000000

HIS LACK OF NERVE.

From the New York Daily News. "No, no, don't kill the poor thing. Let

Thus exclaimed a beautiful girl of 19. the daughter of Captain Blake, master of the bark, Newton, which, by stress of weather, had been driven so close into the shore of Lower Guinea, Africa, that the skipper had been obliged to anchor to save his vessel from stranding.

On the day after anchoring he went on a hunting excursion, from which he soon returned, bringing with him the little cub of a tigress, which he had found in a cay-

The creature was not as large as a fullgrown cat, but it looked much flercer. The captain took it aft, holding it up by the back of its neck before his daughter. "See, Louisa!" he exclaimed, laughing, "I have brought a curiosity to show you. Look your fill, for I intend to shoot animal as soon as my gun is loaded for Then it was that Louisa besought her father not to kill the creature, but to let father not to kill the creature, but to let it go.

"You carry your pity too far, my child," answered the captain. "Don't you know that if I let this cub go it may live to grow up and tear some human being to pleces?"

"You can keep it in a cage and preserve it," said the third mate.

"That would be too much trouble," was the reply. "But I don't think I'll shoot it, after all. Here, Brand," he added turning to his first officer, Louisa's betrothed. "I will hold it down to the deck and you can knock it on the head with a handspike. That will be the best way to get rid of it."

"I do not think so," said Brand. "As one blow would not kill the creature, it would suffer much torture before it died."

"Ay, ay: now here's a soft-hearted fellow for you!" exclaimed the captain. "Louisa, he is afraid of a little cub! Come, sir, you must do as I say!"

"No, sir!" replied the young man, descending into the cabin, where he was soon joined by Louisa.

The second officer, Mr. Barle, was not quite as scrupulous as Brand.

"I did not know Mr. Brand was such a cowsard." remarked the captain, as he threw the body of the young beast overboard." "Nor I," said the second mate. "It was coward." remarked the captain, as he threw the body of the young beast overboard.

"Nor I," said the second mate. "It was lack of nerve and nothing else that made him refuse to kill the cub."

Louisa emerged from the cabin in time to hear these words. She said nothing, but her lip curled with scorn as she swept past the speaker.

Two hours later it was night. The moon shone brightly, lighting up the bark and the wild scenery of the high wooded shore, within a few fathoms of which lay the vessel, one of her yards forward almost touching the branch of a tree on the bank. The captain had let go only one anchor. The largest one hung from the starboard catheads, ready to be dropped at a moment's notice if required.

By the after rall stood the skipper's daughter, talking to her lover. On the other side of the deck was the second mate, Mr. Barle. Forward all the men, except one, were in the forecastle asleep.

Suddenly a crashing sound was heard on land; a large, dark, striped body emerged from the shrubbery. With a wild, sharp yell, a huge tigress—evidently the mother of the cub tracking her lost young one—sprang aboard the bark!

The man forward, uttering a cry of terror, darted down into the forecastle. The tigress, bounding aft, cronched within a few yards of the two lovers.

The second mate, on beholding this horrible apparition, ran, pale and trembling, down into the cabin, the captain's daughter shrieked and shrank closely to the side of Brand.

"Run, Louisa, run into the cabin!" cried the young man, in a clear, steady voice.

"Yes, if you come with me!" gasped the interior of the condition of the side of Brand. "I am a clear, steady voice.

"Yes, if you come with me!" gasped the interior of the cabin." cried the young man, in a clear, steady voice.

"Yes, if you come with me!" gasped the interior of the condition of the cabin." The second condition is the fate of both of the cabin. "I am a clear, steady voice." Yes, if you come with me!" gasped the interior of the cabin." I said Brand. "I am a to say you.

"Yes, if you come with me!" gasped the girl.

"That would insure the fate of both of us," said Brand. "I am to save you, though I have to give up in life!"

He sprang between Le and the tigress, still requesting his fair companion to run into the cabin.

Instead of doing so she hurried to his side. His giance fell on a handspike lying on its end against the rail. He picked it up and, just as the beast was about leaping upon him, with extended claws and open mouth, he bounded forward and drove the implement down the throat of the savage creature.

rolled over on its side.

Brand, taking advantage of this, seized Louisa in his arms and darted to the cabin, when, to his dismay, he perceived that the door of the companionway was shut and fastened, the second mate having in his scuttle.

He therefore kept on, leaping on the knighthead, and then getting over the rail into the head, to the left of the starboard anchor.

On reaching the windlass the tigress had been delayed a little by the jib downhaul and the cable, which were in its way. Soon, however, it succeeded in passing these impediments, when it sprang upon the cathead, and thence upon the anchor stock, from which it could now see the lovers, crouching in the head.

With a piercing yell, followed by a deep growl, it prepared to spring upon the two fugitives.

Brand stooped over in a bent position, thus screening her from the sight of the tigress.

thus screening her from the sight of the tigress.

Just as the latter was about making its terrible leap its fore feet slipped down through the ring by which the anchor hung from the cathead.

A sudden thought went like lightning through his brain.

Drawing Louisa up from the head to the bow, he sprang in board and, as quick as a flash, let go the anchor.

With a sound like thunder the iron links of the cable spun round the windlass. Then there was a tremendous splash, followed by a gurgling yell, as the tigress, fast to the anchor, was drawn beneath the surface.

At the same moment the captain, gun in hand, followed by the second mate, who, however, kept far in the rear, came rushing forward.

After Louisa had described the good conduct of her lover she turned her eyes, flashing with scorn, upon the second officer. fashing with scorn, upon the second ficer.

"What of Mr. Brand's lack of nerve now?" she inquired.

As to the captain, he embraced Brand, saying in a hearty voice:

"God bless you, my lad, and I hope you'll forgive me for the mistake I made. I now understand that the very courage that has made you face a full-grown tigress in defense of my child was what rendered you unwilling to inflict needless pain on a helpless little cub."
